Description:

Dr. Raviprakash R Salagame, Head, Engineering Operations and Global Leader at Delphi Technical Centre, India

Ravi has over two decades of experience in various facets of engineering from research to product development in mechanical and electronics industry. His career has spanned from individual contribution in the area of design optimization and CAE to setting up and leading cross-competency engineering teams and leading total product development from 'concept to launch'. Currently he heads product engineering that covers broad spectrum of competencies from mechanical and electronic design to simulation and verification. Ravi is a certified six sigma black belt from GE and has been a trainer and a champion of continuous improvement initiatives at GE and Delphi. He has core expertise in optimization, Design of Experiments and computational mechanics and published his work in these areas.

Title of the talk: "Engineering – Learning to Practicing". The seminar offers a perspective on what it takes to scale up to become a good practicing engineer based on what is and what is not learnt in school. It is a talk based on personal experience and professional learning.
